

AVOID THE RUSH

Get ready for June 30

It seems like June 30 rolls around quicker every year, so why wait until the last minute to get your personal finances in order?

With all the uncertainty and special support measures of the past two years, it's possible your finances have changed for better, or for worse. So it's a good idea to ensure you're on track for the upcoming end-of-financial-year (EOFY).

Starting early is essential if you want to make the most of the opportunities on offer when it comes to your super and tax affairs.

New limits for super contributions

A key task for EOFY is maximising your super contributions to boost your retirement savings and take advantage of the available tax benefits. Annual contribution limits for super rose this financial year, so this strategy is even more attractive.

From 1 July 2021, most people's annual concessional contributions cap increased to $27,500 (up from $25,000). This allows you to contribute a bit extra into your super on a before-tax basis, potentially reducing your taxable income.

If you have any unused concessional contribution amounts from previous financial years and your super balance is less than $500,000, you may be able to "carry forward" these amounts to further top up.

Another strategy is to make a personal contribution for which you claim a tax deduction. These contributions count towards your $27,500 cap and were previously available only to the self-employed. To qualify, you must notify your super fund in writing of your intention to claim and receive acknowledgement.

Non-concessional super strategies

If you have some spare cash, it may also be worth taking advantage of the higher non-concessional (after-tax) contributions cap. From 1 July 2021, the general non concessional cap increased to $110,000 annually (up from $100,000).

These contributions can be a great help if you've reached your concessional contributions cap, received an inheritance, or have additional personal savings you would like to put into super. If you are aged 67 or older, however, you need to meet the requirements of the work test or work test exemption.

For those under age 67 (previously age 65) at any time during 2021-22, you may be able to use a bring-forward arrangement to make a contribution of up to $330,000 (three years x $110,000).

To take advantage of the bring-forward rule, your total super balance (TSB) must be under the relevant limit on 30 June of the previous year. Depending on your TSB, your personal contribution limit may be less than $330,000, so it's a good idea to talk to us before making your contribution.

More super things to think about

If you plan to make tax-effective super contributions through a salary sacrifice arrangement, now is a good time to discuss this with your employer, as the ATO requires an effective arrangement to be documented prior to commencement.

Another option if you're aged 65 and over and plan to sell your home is a downsizer contribution. You can contribute up to $300,000 ($600,000 for a couple) from the proceeds without meeting the work test.

And don't forget making a contribution into your low-income spouse's super account could score you a tax offset of up to $540.

To take advantage of these super tax concessions, ensure your contributions meet all the eligibility rules and are received by your super fund well before June 30.

Get your SMSF shipshape

If you have your own self-managed super fund (SMSF), it's important to check it's in good shape for EOFY and your annual audit.

Administrative tasks such as updating the fund's minutes, lodging any transfer balance account reports (TBARs), checking the COVID relief measures (residency, rental, loan repayment and in-house assets), and undertaking the annual market valuation of fund assets should all be started now.

It's also sensible to review your fund's investment strategy and check whether the fund's assets remain appropriate.

Know your tax deductions

It's also worth thinking beyond super, to see what else you can do to reduce tax.

If you've been working from home due to COVID-19, you can use the shortcut method to claim 80 cents per hour worked for your running expenses. But make sure you have detailed records of hours worked to substantiate your claim.

You also need to prepare supporting documents to claim work-related expenses such as car, travel, clothing and self-education. Check whether you qualify for other common expense deductions such as tools, equipment, union fees, the cost of managing your tax affairs, charity donations and income protection premiums.

Review your investment portfolio

After a year of strong investment market performance, now is also a good time to do a thorough analysis of your finances outside super.

Review your investment strategy, benchmark your portfolio's performance and check whether any assets need to be sold or purchased to rebalance the portfolio back into line with your strategy.

You might also consider realising any investment losses, as these can be offset against capital gains you made during the year.

There's a lot to think about, so if you would like to discuss EOFY strategies and super contributions, call our office.

2021-22 EOFY tips for business owners

- Ensure any Super Guarantee and employee salary sacrifice contributions you plan to claim a tax deduction for in 2021-22 are made prior to June 30
- Consider whether to take advantage of the temporary full expensing regime that allows an immediate 100% write-off of eligible assets purchased and installed in the period 6 October 2020 to 30 June 2022
- Ensure your quarterly BAS, GST returns and Single Touch Payroll reports are all up-to-date
- Check whether your enterprise meets the eligibility rules for small business capital gains tax (CGT) concessions if you are contemplating winding up or selling your business soon
- Consider bringing forward any expenses due early in the new financial year to reduce your taxable income. Small expense amounts under $1,000 can be claimed without triggering the prepayment rules
- Write off any bad debts so you can claim a tax deduction

Rise Financial

25 Michell Street
Monash, ACT 2904

P 02 6292 0015

F 02 6292 0071

E phil@risefinancial.com.au

W www.risefinancial.com.au

Phil Thompson is a Certified Financial Planner and Director of Rise Financial Pty Ltd as trustee for the Thompson Family Trust (ACN: 123 540 027), Australian Financial Services Licence: 311718. General Advice Warning: This advice may not be suitable to you because contains general advice that has not been tailored to your personal circumstances. Please seek personal financial advice prior to acting on this information. Investment Performance: Past performance is not a reliable guide to future returns as future returns may differ from and be more or less volatile than past returns.